World Wildlife Day

The United Nations General Assembly (UNGA) proclaimed March 3rd signature of the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora (CITES). UNGA made it a day to celebrate and raise awareness for the world's wild animals and plants. World Wildlife Day is a way to make everyone more aware of the benefits that conservations and other positive animal recourses provide to the world's endangered animals. This day also encourages us to stand up and fight against wildlife crimes and habitat destruction. Some of the endangered animals in our desert region to keep in mind are the Gopher Tortoise, Yuma Clapper Rail, and the Desert Big Horn Sheep. These magnificent animals are just a few of many that we should enjoy and appreciate.
