

Resolution 06-07-05: Professional and Collegial Conduct of Faculty Members

WHEREAS, the faculty of Palo Verde College seeks to uphold the highest standards of professional and collegial conduct while teaching in the classroom and while conducting College business outside the classroom; and

WHEREAS, the faculty upholds the principles of academic freedom (as defined in Resolution 06-07-01 Academic Freedom—Faculty), and recognizes that academic freedom is grounded in professional and collegial conduct; and

WHEREAS, the faculty supports the standards of professional conduct codified in the Professional Self-Disclosure Statement, which is part of the current CTA contract and which states: “[Faculty member] demonstrates professionalism as evidenced by: cooperativeness with the College Community and the public...[and] collegiality” (Item 6, Faculty Evaluation Procedure, District-CTA Contract); and

WHEREAS, the faculty supports the 1987 AAUP (American Association of University Professors) Statement on Professional Ethics; and

WHEREAS, the faculty recognizes that unprofessional and non-collegial conduct adversely affects the rights of other faculty, College personnel, or students and detracts from the professional stature of the College as an institution of higher learning; and

WHEREAS, the faculty, in the spirit of professionalism and collegiality, seeks to maintain such standards through a process of self-regulation,

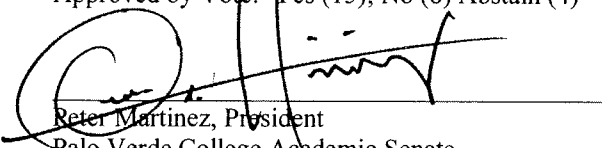

THEREFORE, the faculty of Palo Verde College affirms that all faculty members uphold the highest standards of professional and collegial conduct while teaching in the classroom and while conducting College business.

An ethics statement should spur us to be our best. In adopting the ethics statement of the American Association of University Professors, we not only have aligned ourselves more fully with our colleagues at senior institutions but also have accepted and endorsed a policy that is a source of pride and inspiration.

1987 AAUP STATEMENT ON PROFESSIONAL ETHICS

- I. Community college faculty members, guided by a deep conviction of the worth and dignity of the advancement of knowledge, recognize the special responsibilities placed upon them. Their primary responsibility to their subjects is to seek and to state the truth as they see it. To this end faculty members devote their energies to developing and improving their scholarly competence. They accept the obligation to exercise critical self-discipline and judgment in using, extending, and transmitting knowledge. They practice intellectual honesty. Although faculty members may follow subsidiary interests, these interests must never seriously hamper or compromise their freedom of inquiry.
- II. As teachers, faculty members encourage the free pursuit of learning in their students. They hold before them the best scholarly standards of their discipline. Faculty members demonstrate respect for the student as an individual, and adhere to their proper role as intellectual guides and counselors. Faculty members make every able effort to foster honest academic conduct and to assure that evaluation of students reflects their true merit. They respect the confidential nature of the relationship between faculty member and student. They avoid any exploitation of students for private advantage and acknowledge significant assistance from them. They protect the academic freedom of students.
- III. As colleagues, faculty members have obligations that derive from common membership in the community of scholars. Faculty members do not discriminate against or harass colleagues. They respect and defend the free inquiry of associates. In the exchange of criticism and ideas faculty members show due respect for the opinions of others. Faculty members acknowledge their academic debts and strive to be objective in their professional judgment of colleagues. Faculty members accept their share of faculty responsibilities for the governance of their institution.

- IV. As members of an academic institution, faculty members seek above all to be effective teachers and scholars. Although faculty members observe the stated regulations of their institutions, provided the regulations do not contravene academic freedom, they maintain their right to criticize and seek revision. Faculty members give due regard to their paramount responsibilities within their institution in determining the amount and character of work done outside it. When considering the interruption or termination of their service, faculty members recognize the effect of their decisions upon the program of the institution and give due notice of their intentions.
- V. As members of their community, faculty members have the rights and obligations of all citizens. Faculty members measure the urgency of these obligations in the light of their responsibilities to their subject areas, to their students, to their profession, and to their institutions. When they speak or act as private persons they avoid creating the impression that they speak or act for their colleges or universities. As citizens engaged in a profession that depends upon freedom for its health and integrity, faculty members have a particular obligation to promote conditions of free inquiry and to further public understanding of academic freedom.
